Sirs:

I has come to my attention that the FCC intends to relax profanity and vulgarity restrictions on broadcast TV. I most adamantly oppose this. Having lived in foreign countries where such things are permitted I have seen the negative effect that such programing has on the public acceptance of lower moral standards and the promoting of less respectful standards of communication among the population in general.

These are public airways and they must be protected for the vast majority of citizens who desire to have an alternative to cable TV for their family entertainment.
